The Lee school house, west of town, presented an animated appearance last Sunday afternoon, being gay with flow-ers and babies—the latter being espe-cially good-natured. The occasion was the remembrance of Children's day by the Sunday School, organized there some few months ago. The audience tested the capacity of the building. The Weather-Crop Bulletin for week ending June 21, says: The weather conditions of the past week have been favorable to all growing crops, and they still continue to improve rapidly: Wheat is heading out and in some localities of the southern section is turning yellow. The hay crop is in good condition and cutting commenced this week in the southern section. The crop promises an average fiield. The grain aphis has appeared in some fields this year but not to the same extent as last year, and but few localities report it to any extent. Potatoes and oats are doing finely, and the yield will be up to the average, with the continuance of good weather. The localities that received no rainfall durthe last week, have had showers during this, and consequently the condition is much improved. During the thunder storm of the 17th, hail fell in St. Joseph county of considerable size, but no particular damage to the growing crops has been reported. The rainfall during this storm in this county was heavy, although the duration was short.

Governesses in New South South Wales. New South Wales does not seem an ideal place for "gentlewomen" to emigrate to. An advertisement recently appeared in a Sydney paper to the following purport: "Governess required, country, eldest pupil eleven; must be good teacher." Attracted by the last words a lady who has ably filled some of the best appointments in England and in the colony, but who was for the moment disengaged, answered the advertisement. And this is the reply she received to her letter, verbatim et literatim, including the punctuation: "In reply to yours I require a governess to teach English music drawing French (beginners), calisthenics there are four pupils eldest eleven young-est four and a half and two younger children with whom you would have little to do as there is a nurse. Your two younger pupils would require to be washed and dressed and the eldest to have her hair done. There would be a few light household duties of which I could tell you should you consider the position likely to suit you. The salary is £30 per annum!"

Surely, this is enough; but there fol-lows a gracious promise that the salary shall be raised by a pound or two, "if you suit your employers" and "are agreeable in the house." It is fortunate for the successful applicant for this lu-crative appointment that she will have but little to do with children under the age of 41; for, with four to teach all the subjects required, two to dress entirely, and two to have their hair done, what time is the unfortunate governess to have for herself? But, then, she is to receive £30 a year, with a promise of a "rise," if she is "agreeable" in the house. -Albany Argus.

Dangers of Close Reports.

The imitative faculty in young persons The imitative faculty in young persons laads often to tragic happenings, as well es to the query: Are there not vast dangers in the minute details, made public in the newspapers, as to crimes and their perpetration? A lad in London has succeeded in closely imitating the atrocities of the Whitechapel flend, dissecting his victim—another lad—in just the manner described in the papers relating the murders. Another case in point comes from lowa, where a boy killed his small brother after witnessing the operation of butchering hogs. The youthful murderer became absorbed in the gory operation, and next day invited his victim to play butchering and to assume the role play butchering and to assume the role of the hog. This he did with such zeal that his innocent young life was the forfeit. To give to the world the minutest details of a brutal murder is to increase the chances that, among some of the youngest readers of these samples of unnecessary realism, there will be let loose an eyil spirit of imitation, whose mission will be accomplished only when another horror is performed. The illustrated police papers and the sensational journals that revel in details of hideous crimes have much to answer for, and too often serve as accessories in rob-beries and murders.—Pittsburg Bulletin. month.

BAY WILKES,

A worthy son of the mighty George Wilkes, the greatest sire the world has ever known, having over seventy (70) with records from 2:13 to 2:30, and in the stud only nine years. Bay Wilkes never made a season in the stud until the fall of 1885; hence, his oldest colts are but 3 years old, and all of them are showing wonderful action and speed. A few of his colts, last season, trotted in from 2:3414 to 2:45, when less than three years old. They are nearly all Bays, are large, rangy fellows: no "outs" about them, as they
